Track and field athletics

Track and field athletics is one of the most popular kinds of sport. Over eight million go in for track-and-field in our country. That is why it is often called the queen of sports. Track-and-field — why such name? It is because the main part of the events are contested either on the track or on the field of the stadium. The track sees all the races both in running and walking. Field events consist of jumping and throwing. Track and field athletics also includes combined events: decathlon and pentathlon. The Olympic combined event is decathlon.

Running and walking distinguish two kinds of starts — the crouch start and the dab start. The first kind of start, the crouch start, is used in sprint distances because it allows the sportsman to pick up speed at the very beginning of the race. The dab start is used in medium and long distances. The number of athletes on the start depends upon the distance.

Hurdling, is one of the most difficult and most attractive forms of athletics.
Hurdle races include the following distances: 110 m., 200 m. and 400 m. At each of these distances there are ten hurdles. The height of the hurdle depends on the distance.

Steeple-chase is also one of the Olympic events of track-and-field. At the distance of 3000 meters there are 35 different obstacles among which there is a pit filled with water. The athlete should take this pit seven times.

There are four varieties of jumping: high-jumping, long-jumping, triple-jump and pole-vaulting.

And at last throwing. This event of track-and-field consists of shot-putting, discus-throwing, javelin throwing and hammer-throwing. Discus-throwing is one of the oldest events: It was born in ancient Greece more than 3000 years ago.

Javelin was also born in ancient Greece where it was included into the programme of field and track meets and pentathlon: Javelin weighs 800 gr., its length is.260270 cm.

Hammer-throwing, one of the Olympic events of track and field athletics, was born in England at the beginning of the XIXth century.
